Course description

This is an introductory course in global health that aims to explore key issues in global health from a multidisciplinary (economics, political science, sociology, management, etc.) perspective. The course will begin with an introduction of a brief history, key social theories, and values of global health. The course then covers global burden of disease, inequalities in global health distribution and determinants, various global health systems, issues in health delivery, the role of international actors in global health, and the impact of foreign aid on health and development. Relevant real-world case examples are introduced as well. Finally, the course reviews prospects and emerging challenges in global health.

Learning objectives

By the end of the course, students will be able to do the following:

- Gain a global perspective of health
- Understand the principles and goals of global health
- Describe the root causes of health inequity at the global level
- Understand the importance of health systems strengthening in improving global health
- Explain the impact of aid on development and health outcomes and pathways in resource-poor settings

Course format

- Please note that this course is a highly interactive and participatory course and requires students' proactive engagement in each session.
- Students are supposed to obtain the basic knowledge on each session topic through reading assignments. At the beginning of each class, there will be 2-3 QUIZ questions (not graded) to assess the students' understanding of the reading materials.

- The first half of each session will be spent on the instructor's lecture (focused on the gist of the session topic and introducing relevant theories, and/or recent trends beyond the reading materials).
- The second half will be spent on class activities including 1) group discussion and impromptu presentations, 2) group analysis (e.g., root-cause analysis), 3) hands-on exercises (DALY calculation), 4) live polling, etc.

Auditing policy

Auditing is not allowed for students who are enrolled and can register for a class.

Course materials

There is no required textbook for this course. The required (and/or further) readings for reading assignments for each topic are listed under the detailed Course Schedule pages of this document. All of the readings will be posted on the eTL site ahead of time for each session. For students interested in further readings, below are some recent relevant textbooks on global health related issues:

Supplementary books:

- Birn AE, Pillay Y, Holtz TH, eds. 2017. Textbook of Global Health (4th Edition). New York: Oxford University Press.
- Brown GW, Yamey G, Wamala S, eds. 2014. The Handbook of Global Health Policy.
- Paul Farmer, Jim Yong Kim, Arthur Kleinman, and Matthew Basilio, eds. 2013. Reimagining Global Health: An Introduction. Berkeley: University of California Press.
- Case Studies in Global Health: Millions Saved (2nd edition). Ed: Ruth Levine.

Course requirements

Attendance

- Students are expected to attend all classes. In case of unavoidable absence, students should let the instructor know ahead of time.

Reading assignments

- All students are expected to read all reading materials (at least those under the subheading 'reading assignments') before attending class.
- The first 5 minutes of each class will be spent on checking the students' understanding of the reading materials, through 2-3 QUIZ questions (not graded).

Class participation

- Students are expected to proactively participate in class activities and class discussion.

Group activities

- For some sessions, group work (e.g., group presentations on a pre-specified topic, preparation for GH book club) is required.
- All students are expected to proactively participate in group activities (each student's level of contribution to group work will be evaluated through peer-evaluation).

Short essay (individual work)

- All students are supposed to write a short essay (2 pages, a template will be provided) answering 3-4 key questions (to be introduced during the class).
- The individual essay should be submitted through eTL (due midnight before the day for the class of Session 14) and be verbally presented (without slides) during Session 14.

Final exam

- In-class exam will be held in Session 15.

Assessment of performance

- A total of 100 points are possible in this course. Grading will be based on the following performance:
 - Class participation: 10
 - Self-introduction
 - Completion of reading assignments
 - Participation in class activities (e.g., hands-on exercises, role playing)
 - Participation in class discussion
 - Group activities: 30 (instructor evaluation: 15, peer evaluation: 10, peer-evaluation for contribution: 5)
 - Group presentations (Sessions #2, #7) → 5 points each
 - GH book club (Sessions #4, #5, #13) → 5 points each
 - Group discussion and impromptu presentations
 - Short essay: 10
 - Final exam: 50
- Final letter grades will be assigned according to the following scale:
 - A = 88-100
 - B = 80-87
 - C = 70-79
 - D = 60-69
